The most difficult part of the last for me was essentially trying to understand the structure and how my portion of code went along with the rest of my groups. Understanding what to code was a bit difficult when I first read the instructions but after watching the videos and getting help from my group it became clear on how my code should look. I produced the RogueThread portion of the code which was easy once I understood the structure and typed my code out. I tested my code by inputting my groupmates' code into an IDE to make sure it worked and ran properly with my portion of code. Overall, the lab was easy once actually started and given the correct guidance.
